

DISCRIMINATION IN THE SCHOOL ENVIRONMENT

Assoc. Prof. PhD Costel Pleșcan

PhD Ion Negrilă

Transilvania University of Brașov, Romania

ABSTRACT

Discrimination in the school environment is a major problem with profound implications on the personal and educational development of students. It can take various forms, including racial, gender, ethnic, religious, social, and ability-based discrimination. In this paper, we will analyze in detail the types of discrimination encountered in schools, their causes and consequences, as well as the measures and policies implemented to combat them. In education, it could be said that a student has been deprived of an educational opportunity, loan, group, or scholarship because of gender or age. In property negotiations, a woman could be denied the opportunity to rent a home or receive a loan because of their gender. Another example of gender discrimination that has been observed in banking is when someone is denied a loan or given a different term for a loan based on gender.

Keywords: discrimination, education, school, pupils

INTRODUCTION

Carrying out scientific investigations designed to explore the origins, consequences and various forms of unequal treatment. Increasing the prevalence of quantitative and qualitative research in this area will contribute to the development of a conceptual framework relevant to this complex problem, improving methodological approaches for identifying and evaluating various and subtle causes, effects and forms of unequal treatment. It is important to note that only the findings of studies and investigations can highlight the progress made in terms of the origin and forms of discrimination, especially in the context of a society increasingly affected by globalization, with multiple and complex implications. The findings of investigations should become the basis for preventing and dealing with discrimination more effectively. Proposals for actions to prevent and reduce discrimination in the labour market. Implementing effective workplace practices is essential, whether it's a small or large business, to ensure that team members are well-informed and doing well. This helps to maintain harmony and increase productivity in the workplace by eliminating any form of unequal treatment or harassment.

Objectives:

Identification of Forms of Discrimination:

Identify and classify the different forms of discrimination that occur in the school environment (e.g. racial, gender, socio-economic, religious, etc.).